

REVOLUTIONISE YOUR LIFE WITH CLEAR HEARING!

David Johnson has a hearing loss, yet one of the most rewarding activities of his life is spending the day in a busy, noisy place, answering the never-ending questions of curious children. He is a volunteer at the Scitech Discovery Centre, where he helps children explore the exhibits and learn more about science. For anyone with a hearing loss, hearing in such an environment would be a nightmare, requiring full concentration and a lot of double-guessing to keep up with the conversation, leaving you exhausted at the end of the day.

David's desire to be involved in the community and help give young people direction and encouragement was a catalyst for him to look for help for his hearing.

"When I first started volunteering at Scitech, I had great difficulties hearing the children: some are shy, they look down and speak softly; it was very difficult to hear their questions and separate their voice from the other children and the general noise." "Those days are now gone." says David.

In early 2008, David was assessed by one of Sonic Hearing's university qualified Audiologists. "She explained that my ears had lost their ability to hear certain sounds and having worked in telecommunications before, I could understand very well how if not all the sounds are coming through, this is why my hearing is not clear" says David.

Shortly after, David was fitted with a pair of micro hearing aids. This was the first time he tried hearing aids. "I can hear clearly what's going on: at the morning briefing, with the school groups, going around the exhibits, I also train other volunteers." "It is very rewarding to be involved and able to inspire and motivate young people to learn and take the right direction in life." "I would have been disappointed with myself if I'd let the hearing get in the way."

If you, like David, don't want your life to be held back by hearing difficulties, come in and see the professional staff at
